Good corporate citizenship is part of our culture.

Powering our communities is just the beginning. Exelon considers it our responsibility to improve the quality of life for people in the communities where we live, work and serve.

Exelon focuses our corporate giving in four areas—education, the environment, arts and culture, and neighborhood development. We support and value diversity and inclusion; we try to reflect the communities in which we operate.

Exelon also encourages our employees to support the organizations that they care about through volunteer service. We provide opportunities for the company to share their commitments through company-sponsored volunteerism and matching financial support.
